Author's Commentary:

"This year's report continues to prove just how successful Internet leads are in generating consistent revenue for lenders that utilize the channel," said Drew Warmington, CEO of iLeads.com, LLC. "And, the key takeaways are the massive untapped potential of this channel and the growth of this channel in the past year."

iLeads.com uses data and analytics to help companies in the mortgage and real estate industry to improve their customer acquisition strategies to take advantage of this untapped potential.

Rob Seaver, Executive Director at the LeadsCouncil added, "We see this untapped potential and we are helping our members who are looking for mortgage leads to better understand the value of the Internet channel so we can be a partner in their success."

LeadsCouncil serves members in varied industries by providing valuable research, education opportunities, compliance information, networking opportunities and advocacy to help them thrive.

Conclusion:

2016 shows mortgage originators continue to find great financial success by using the Internet lead channel to acquire new customers. The study also shows, that there is great untapped potential remaining in consumers who have raised their hand via an Internet lead form but have not originated a loan yet.

The iLeads.com / LeadsCouncil Mortgage Lead Funding Study report continues to show a clear opportunity for loan origination companies to grow their business through both optimization as well as analysis of their 3rd party lead sellers. To realize this true funding potential, originators need to determine who they are losing the business to, and why.

By combining data and smart analysis with the core benefits of the online lead channel (fixed costs, continued growth and consistency), lenders have a clear path to success.
